PREFACE

The ninth edition of Comparative Data on Alabama Counties is based primarily on responses to a survey conducted by Auburn University's Government and Economic Development Institute on behalf of the Association of County Commissions of Alabama. This publication represents the actual responses of the counties and is intended to offer an overview of county government in Alabama and how the 67 counties compare in a host of important areas. Other sources of information are noted appropriately in the publication.

As is the case with any survey publication, the accuracy of the information cannot be certified by the Association of County Commissions of Alabama or Auburn University. The responses contained in this publication are presented as they were recorded in the survey. Additionally, some of the information contained herein may have changed between the time the survey was conducted and its publication in the fall of 2016. Some local acts affecting county government that were passed by the Legislature in 2015 and 2016 are not reflected in the data contained in this publication. All budget information is based upon the 2015-16 fiscal year budgets, unless noted otherwise.

The salary information for county officials does reflect the impact of Act 2000-108 (Omnibus Compensation Act), which became effective October 1, 2000.

The contents of this publication are organized in chart form so that comparisons can be made easily and quickly. Often times footnotes are used to explain abbreviations used in charts.

Every effort was made to obtain all information from every county. However, some counties chose not to respond to the survey. As a result, readers will notice a few instances where no information appears beside a county name.

As plans are made for the tenth edition of Comparative Data on Alabama Counties, suggestions and comments are welcome and should be directed to the Association of County Commissions of Alabama, P.O. Box 5040, Montgomery, AL 36103.
